

Interstate Outdoor Helps Katrina Victims

Employees of Interstate Outdoor Advertising in Cherry Hill, NJ, load more than 2000 pounds of donated clothing, headed to families in Baton Rouge, LA and Mobile, AL, whose lives were displaced by Hurricane Katrina. Partnering with Interstate was Watkins Motor Lines Inc., which provided the truck at no cost to transport 60 boxes of clothing to those in need. From left are Joe Salema, Michael Fratini, Nicole Elstein, Kay Osman, Interstate CEO Drew Katz, Jose Joseph, Tom Rende, Chris Leverage, Mark Macey, Larry King and Jeff Gerber.
